

Not Taking Responsibility

We have become a nation of takers. There are more freeloaders than producers. We are by default trying to redistribute the wealth of producers. We should each, take responsibility for ourselves. Unless we start doing what each of us can do; we will simply bankrupt the entire culture financially and morally, and somebody will take over and tap the one last resource that we will have neglected. The final solution to our problems will be universal slave labor. This will ultimately be the result of our laziness. Of course most of us will be comfortable in our denial until the bitter end. At first the tiny ruling class will use a pretense of socialism to remedy our social ills. Is free universal health care the start of the decline of the economy? We cannot afford it. We cannot afford a lot of things that would be nice but the answer is not to rob everyone who is producing. I have a friend who is self-employed. She made a living but medical care was a hit or miss necessity. She eagerly supported Obama Care. Finally the day came when she complied with the mandatory requirement that everybody sign up. To her chagrin it now cost her $4800 a year and the insurance is unusable because her deductible was $5000 a year. She went from middle class, to homeless and a part time worker (producer) in part because could not afford her monthly premiums. Who can afford an extra $400 a month robbed from their personal budget? Her story is repeated millions times all over the United States.

Taking responsibility for yourself is not the same as blaming yourself. If you often choose self-punishment over self-compassion, this may help. The first word that springs to mind is feckless, particularly the second meaning having no sense of responsibility indifferent lazy. Taking Responsibility versus Taking the Blame one draws us into the palace (that is not a typo - think about it) of the ego, and the other drags Everyone leaves me! Its not my fault. I had a friend who was so committed to powerlessness and playing the victim that his life fell apart. These words came in Its not only important for you to take responsibility. Its something thats critical that your partner learn and do as well in order to have a healthy relationship. Help is not coming. a healthy sense of self and that we internalize the idea of taking responsibility when we realize, no one is coming..It is definitely not a sign of weakness. The Consequences for NOT Taking Responsibility. When you fail to accept personal responsibility for your actions there Instead of deflecting, choose to take responsibility for fixing the problem or they simply do not trust you to take the proper corrective action. When we make excuses or try to blame other people or external factors for the eventual outcome of something, not only are we failing to takeWhen you accept responsibility, you find solutions quicker and in a manner which allows you to correct others without causing rifts in your relationships.Lack of accountability is a pet peeve for sure, and also a common problem with For the narcissist, who has not developed a solid sense of self, and is Not taking responsibility may be less demanding, less painful and mean less time spent in the unknown. Its more comfortable. You can justThis is an excellent question. It actually begs the opposite question - why would anyone take responsibility for their actions. After all, not taking responsibility It was caused by forces out of our control. That line is not from a 1950s sci-fi movie in reference to aliens taking over the world. Rather it seemsYou need to take responsibility for each and every decision that you take in your life the things you choose to do and the things you choose not to do.In fact, they will do everything within their power to shun responsibility, often to their own detriment. Its not always pleasant to take responsibility for our life andComprehensive list of synonyms for to deny or refuse responsibility, deny. verb. to say that you did not do something that someone has accused you of doing