

This title is intended for graduate students at the first year or advanced graduate level in the areas of statistical and adaptive signal processing, as well as practicing engineers. The goal of this book is to provide a unified, complete, and practical treatment of spectral estimation, signal modelling, adaptive filtering, and array processing. The text is written in an intuitive manner and includes many illustrative examples. In addition a sufficient number of computer-based experiments are included that illustrate important concepts to the reader for ease of implementation. Throughout the book a sufficient emphasis has been placed on applications for the purposes of demonstrating the utility of various techniques.
