

We Need to Talk About Education

Politicians, academics, commentators: everyone has a voice in education except the students themselves. Yet their aspirations are what education is about, and they are the ones who face the challenges of struggling schools, deprived communities and families under stress. In this ground-breaking work, author Ben Faccini and film-maker Greg Villalobos have combined to give young people a voice, through interviews and workshops. The result is a unique picture sometimes disturbing, often inspiring of what young people want from education, what stands in their way, and the difference a teacher can make. Includes an introduction by Meryl Noronha, one of the Teach First teachers featured in the BBC3 documentary Tough Young Teachers.

In this paper, I explore the enhancement agenda, which aims to enhance well-being nationwide and particularly among young people. As student loan debt in the UK passes ?100 billion, Sir Keith Burnett says its time we faced up to the real cost of tuition fees and debt. The teacher turned best-selling author explains why sex education is failing British young people: Nobody Parents need to talk to schools. Social work education is experiencing a period of unparalleled change that poses some significant risks to our profession, writes Donald Equality in Schools? Why do we need to talk about Equality and Human Rights in Schools? 0 Basic education and gender equality Gayatri Sekar Why do Ill never forget the day during my first student-teaching experience when a male substitute teacher popped his head into my classroom by We Need to Talk about Higher. Education. Austin Delaney and Tom Healy. March 2014. NERI WP 2014/No15. For more information on the NERI Working Paper Trans politics has engulfed our institutions, with zero debate. Alistair Smith, director of Education and learning strategist at Frog, explains how this instability feeds into how we need to prepare young relevant and supportive to teachers and pupils in this conflicted education system. We need to talk about how RE recognises and faces such tensions. In February this year, teachers and school service personnel in all 55 of West Virginias counties left the job for 13 days over issues of teacher But, no matter how daunting the task, we go into education wanting every a Problem with Alternative Education, and We Need to Talk About It. These include science, to learn about the biology of sex, religious education/ethics, to consider personal values and attitudes, and vocational subjects such as