

The airwaves of today's shortwave (HF) radio bands are filled with the mysterious sounds of hundreds of digital communications systems. If you are interested in how and where to find ministries of foreign affairs, embassies, armies, air forces, navies, multinational peacekeepers, police, intelligence agencies, customs and border patrol units, humanitarian aid and other NGOs (Non-Governmental Organizations) on HF radio and discover how they work, then this book is for you. In the 15 years of its publication in Monitoring Times magazine, Digital Digest has shone a light on these many organizations by documenting their operating habits, frequencies and schedules used, reveals the tools and techniques required to break down and analyze the digital systems they employ to discover the underlying messages and secret information. This compilation of columns from 2013 covers such diverse topics as the US Embassy and Consulate Emergency and Evacuation Network, US National Communications System, US Navy Fleet Broadcasts, AT&T Emergency & Preparedness, Australian Over The Horizon RADAR, Chilean Army, Chilean Navy, Colombian Navy, Czech Intelligence, Ecuadorean Navy, North Korean Diplomatic Service, Pakistani Police in Sudan, Polish Army in Afghanistan and the Russian Intelligence Service. In each case, specific information is provided about the organizations operating habits, callsigns and frequencies used, schedules, detailed information on the digital systems employed and examples of messages received. These profiles are supported by extensive links to software tools, audio clips of the stations and systems concerned and other resources of use to the listener. If you enjoy reading this publication, subsequent volumes are available covering the years 2012 to 1998.
