

Surf Rat

Vaughn is on the desperate journey from boy to man. He has a mother who takes her clothes off for a living, a group of surfers who constantly bully him, a father whom he has never met and friends who are misfits. Vaughn has been unable to fit in with his peers ever since he first went to school. He attributes this partly to his looks, and partly to the fact that his mother makes a living as a stripper, which has placed the family outside normal town circles. Being bullied and finding ways of coping with this are central to Vaughn and his friends existence. This escalates throughout the novel, eventually leading to Vaughn's best friend taking things into his own hands as a means of revenge. This backfires in a dramatic way that provides a sad climax towards the end of the novel.
